COMPLIMENTS OF
O. G. SWETMAN

For Permanent Record:

File this copy in your family Bible. Read it occasionally.
Add to it any additional permanent information, thereby keeping this record up to date. From 1798.

"O' Joys to you I hope will fly,
Greatest blessings around you lie,
So let your thoughts to me sometimes hie."

Sincerely,
O. G. Swetman

The writer has photos of our Grand Fathers both on our Fathers side and Mothers side which we will gladly show any one that is interested.

Information in this record has been carefully compiled by O. G. Swetman, of Biloxi, Miss., son of John Emory Swetman and Sarah Long Swetman. Since public records of much of the period covered in this booklet were extremely sketchy, or rudimentary, at their very best, this information has had to be gleaned from family bibles, tombstone inscriptions and "old settler" or pioneer knowledge. It represents careful cross-checking over a period of many years but it may, because of the difficulty involved in this method of research, contain some blank spots or deletions in some family connections.

For this reason a blank page is being left after each family sub-division, and the various members of the family to whom this record is distributed are urged to fill in any specific information relating to the family in that particular period which might have inadvertently escaped the original careful search. In the event an omission is discovered it is requested that you send a copy of the missing information to O. G. Swetman, Peoples Bank of Biloxi, Biloxi, Miss., so that he may also add the additional data to his own copies of this publication.

As an illustration of how some of this information was collected is this particular item below:

Mr. J. W. Byrd, age 82, now living with his sister at 523 Heidenheim Avenue, healthy, hearty and happy, working every day in road work for Harrison County Supervisors, visited Mr. O. G. Swetman, in his Peoples Bank office recently and told him that he was the son of John I. Byrd, of Woolmarket now buried in Coalville Cemetery and that John I. Byrd, Sarah Byrd and Julia Harriet were children of John R. Byrd and Rebecca Jones Byrd, of Lorraine, Miss. Sarah Byrd married William M. Swetman and Julia Harriet Byrd married Isaac V. Enochs who thus became brothers-in-law to John I. Byrd, who was born January 13, 1840.

Julia Harriet Byrd Enochs was buried at Crystal Springs, Miss., her husband, I. V. Enochs, born June 10, 1829, died at Terry, Miss., February 25, 1895, and was buried at Crystal Springs, Miss.

Eunice Lyle Swetman had two brothers, and one sister, Robert T., (Bob), Lyle, born July 5, 1871, died December 26, 1934, and buried in Handsboro Cemetery. Robert Lyle had one daughter, Agnes Lyle, who married Ray Brail, They have four children. Reed Lyle, born March 25, 1875, is the other brother, and the sister is Kate Lyle, born September 13, 1877.

This short biographical sketch of Mr. O. G. Swetman was not furnished or written by any member of the Swetman family. While this does not do him or his accomplishments justice in even a small degree, the information that he furnished was entirely too sparse and modest to even begin to set forth his place in the development of the City of Biloxi

O. G. Swetman, when quite a young man, associated himself with the Peoples Bank of Biloxi, which was established in 1896, and was, at that time, a small, struggling country bank. Biloxi was a small town depending largely for its support on the seafood industry. O. G., or "Cinny" Swetman, as he was affectionately known to old Biloxians, moved up in this institution and began to pull the bank up with him. In a few years he was in active management, and the results of his conservative progressivism began to be reflected in the annual reports, the earnings and the growth of this institution. The Peoples Bank, under his management, was in the vanguard of Biloxi's expansion in sea food plants, small industries and anything which could contribute to solid substantial growth of the Biloxi community. Today, the Peoples Bank is recognized as one of the strongest institutions of its kind and has attained a reputation and a substantial place in the financial world, and Mr. O. G. is one of its largest stockholders. Throughout all this growth, Mr. Swetman has never lost the "common touch" with his fellow man, and is generally liked and respected far beyond the confines of the Biloxi community and is beloved by his family and his friends

No Swetman family record would be complete without the inclusion of Robert Cummings, companion and friend of John Emory Swetman, Sr. for more than twenty years. He was a Mason (a good one), a Scotsman, honest, reliable and trustworthy. He was liked and respected by all fortunate enough to know him. He was born about 1825 and died at Handsboro, Miss. and is buried in the Swetman Lots duly designated by a Grey Granite Marker.

No children were born to John Emory Swetman, Jr., and Justine Meaut Swetman.

J. E. Swetman, named for his father, has been affectionately known as “Dink” to his family and his many friends since his very early youth.

He retired from active business when quite young and is well known and universally liked by all who know him, and, in spite of the fact that Biloxi during his years of residence has grown from a small town into one of the largest cities in the State of Mississippi, most of the people of Biloxi do know him and hold him in high regard.

“Dink” Swetman is alert, vigorous and friendly and is frequently to be seen striding vigorously through the business section of the city and greeting his many friends

Gracie Myers Swetman was the daughter of Elisha Myers, Handsboro, who was born in 1831 and died in 1902, and Sarah Fowler Myers, born 1845, died 1944.

Gracie Myers Swetman had two brothers, Lucien Myers, and Arthur Myers, and two sisters Eleanor Myers Seamon, now deceased, and Sarah Myers, who was postmistress of Handsboro for many years and is highly respected and regarded in that coast community.

Charlie Swetman went to Perkinson, Miss., as a young man and entered the mercantile business which he developed very successfully and profitably. He also developed extensive land holdings into profitable and successful farming ventures, and was an outstanding leader in the general development of his section in North Harrison County

He was Postmaster of Perkinson for more than twenty years and was well known and held in high esteem far beyond the confines of his home area in Perkinson.

Having no children of his own, Charlie Swetman set himself the task of developing educational and economic opportunities for all children in the South Mississippi area. He was a prime mover in the original organization of the Perkinson Agricultural High School and Junior College and contributed liberally of his land, money, time and energy in its development. He was Secretary of the Perkinson Junior College Board up to the time of his demise. A memorial Park dedicated to the memory of Charles Clay Swetman has been established on the grounds of Perkinson Junior College

Notes for LOUIS LEE BOYD:

Notes from their daughter Ann Herbert:

My Dad was Louis Lee Boyd - b. Dec. 29, 1910, m. Oct. 20, 1930, d. July 11, 1953. He was a "wannabe" doctor whose family couldn't afford med. school so he quit school at 15 & went to work at James F. Webb Funeral Home. "By the time I was born he was the manager & protege of the owner, James F. Webb". We lived at the funeral home until I was 4 & my brother was due. We moved around the corner & across an alley from the funeral home.

Alene Brand was born May 27, 1912, m. Oct. 20, 1930. After Dad died she remarried Eugene F. Monnier, a C.P.A. in New Orleans, LA. She died Oct. 31, 1984 and both she & Dad are buried in Magnolia Cemetery, Meridian. She & Gene Monnier agreed it would be best for their children to be buried with their first spouses & so they were.
